

ARISE SOCIETY

ASSOCIATION OF RESEARCHERS FOR SERVICES AND EMPOWERMENT

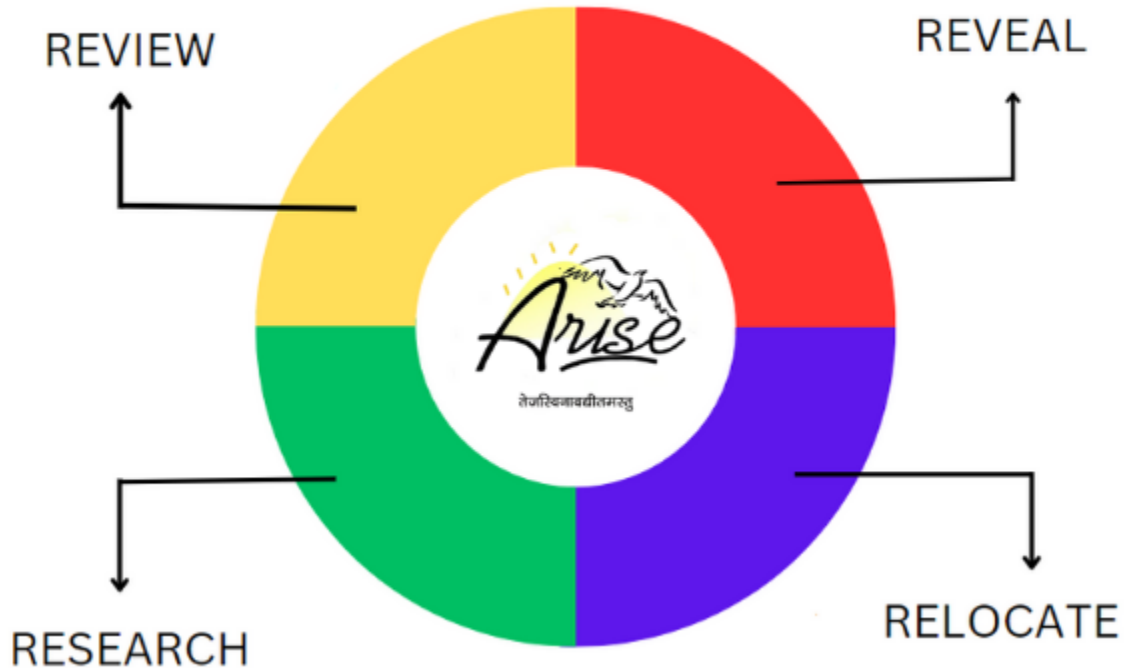

Founded in January 2015, ARISE is an acronym for the Association of Researchers for Services and Empowerment. The first platform to promote social empowerment via research is called ARISE. Research is the fundamental method for analysing social issues in order to deal with the difficulties and provide suitable answers. The purpose of ARISE is to provide three different services: women's empowerment, elderly welfare, and child development.

ARISE is a socio-entrepreneurial platform that is built on research and gap analysis while bolstering the economy via empowerment activities, carrying on the heritage of spreading harmony with proper solidarity. Dr. Chandan was principally responsible for putting the Idea into practise when he founded this non-profit organisation in the Rajasthani region of Baran. Through knowledge, awareness, and resource access, our hardworking team of social activists and researchers is trying to attain a better level of autonomy.

They may establish and expand their businesses over time thanks to this, which gives rise to genuine, important, and prominent economic activity. Women and those who are disadvantaged often have great ideas but are unable to put them into action, and even when they do, they are often unaware of the programmes available to them that may support and assist them in achieving economic independence. Our activities begin with awareness campaigns to educate people about opportunities that, if they fit their ideas or help them shape them in the appropriate directions, would not only benefit the underprivileged but also help create economic prosperity.

Based on the Four R framework, we have a very strong strategy to link to the section with step-by-step processes on an annual basis. The ARISE Society asks the honourable government to provide us the funding and support we need to continue.
